

THE 2018 SKY CHANGERS AWARDS

September 13, 2018 1-3pm | The Battery, San Francisco, California

CAN ANY ONE PERSON CHANGE THE SKY?

What was previously an absurd question is today one of necessity. Leaders are needed to spearhead rapid reductions in atmospheric pollution. The 2018 Sky Changers Awards celebrate such leaders with the aim of inspiring more leaders.

The ceremony will honor scientists and change-makers from China, Indonesia, California and the Congo. We will hear from leaders who use education, science, partnerships and grit to achieve measurable results. If you're coming, you'll meet inspiring people who are solving climate change at scale and at speed. The Sky Changers Awards will give amazing leaders the chance to highlight and share their experience through videos, brief speeches and an active panel discussion. Inspiration will spread.

PARTICIPATING PEOPLE AND ORGANIZATIONS

- Tim Jarvis is a world famous explorer and climate change scientist and activist. Jarvis is the founder of 25 Zero, an initiative to save 25 glaciers through activism and education. Tim's terrifying re-creation of Ernest Shackleton's 1914 Antarctic Exploration and rescue mission, with a replica boat and original gear was captured in the documentary "Chasing Shackleton."
- Ibu Nur Masripatin is Indonesia's top climate change official. Masripatin has helped draft climate change legislation and continues to find time to teach tomorrow's leaders.
- The "2018 California Carbon Fest" participants from China's State Forestry Administration, the University of California Berkeley's College of Natural Resources, Indonesia's Center for Climate Risk and Opportunity Management and Congo's University of Kinshasa. Collaborating through international academic partnerships to tackle terrestrial carbon mapping and analyses for the iconic Blue Natural Reserve of the University of California.
- The Battery and Battery Powered: hosting the Sky Changers awards and showcasing actions that measurably go beyond meeting the Paris Agreement targets.
- Santa Barbara Bucket Brigade, California's home-grown heroes, first responders and community members leading recovery efforts after the State's worst fire and flood double-whammy.
- Other invited special guests to be announced.
